AS THE STARS ABOVE.

She promised him that she'd be true,
True as the stars above;
And he was fat and fifty-two,
And offered her his love.

Oh, she was young and she was fair,
That night they stood alone;
He was a multimillionaire,
And claimed her as his own.

Rich and fat and old was he,
And she was young and slim;
True as the stars above was she,
But how she henpecked him!

OVER THE TEACUPS.

By Lady Gay.

yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Charles Adams who leaves shortly for her home in Chicago.

Luncheon was served at one "al fresco" at small tables each accommodated four, which were arranged under the trees on the shady terrace.

The idea was very picturesque and in keeping with the warm summer days.

The tables were covered by lace centerpieces and cut glass bowls of brown and gold tinted zinnias and maidenhair, which were very appropriate.

Monogram guest cards were used.

After luncheon two tables of bridge filled the afternoon which was played under the trees, the remainder of the luncheon guests who do not play, taking their leave.

The prizes, which were presented to Mrs. Charles Adams and Mrs. Walter F. Dillingham, were table squares from Delhi, exquisitely embroidered in pale green ivy leaves.

At five delicious light refreshments were served.

Those present at luncheon were Mrs. Charles Adams, Mrs. Walter Francis Dillingham, Mrs. George R. Carter, Mrs. W. W. Goodale, Mrs. Montgomery Macomb, Mrs. Walter Cleveland Cowles, Mrs. William Richard Castle, Mrs. Charles Bryant Cooper, Mrs. E. M. Kelley, Mrs. Gertrude P. Wilder, Miss Nora Swanzy, Mrs. Ellicott, Mrs. Joseph A. Gilman, Mrs. F. R. Day, and Mrs. George Meade.

FRISCO LETTER

four acres will be greatly improved. Here it is urged by the committee should be erected the world's greatest wireless telegraph station, from which place communication can be maintained with the Panama Canal and a welcome sent to coming vessels. From the hill the boulevard will be extended along the bay shore to Harbor View. Reasonable assurances have already been secured from the War Department that all government assistance necessary will be given in the matter of securing a temporary loan of government lands. On account of this fact the fair appropriation will probably include enough for a permanent exposition building at Fort Mason which could afterwards be turned into a division headquarters.

At Harbor View will be located the concessions and carnival features which will attract the night crowds. A great water court and yacht harbor will be constructed here, where all the marine attractions of the exposition will be held. The committee recommends that the land now occupied by the Fulton Iron Works be purchased and used as a permanent location for a yacht harbor and aquarium.

From Harbor View the great boulevard commencing at Telegraph Hill will be extended through the Presidio to Lincoln Park overlooking the harbor entrance back of Fort Scott. Here it is planned to erect a giant statue, similar to the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, commemorating the greatest physical achievement of the race in the completing of the Panama Canal. Nearby will be located a splendid marine observatory giving a view of the Golden Gate and the outer straits of the harbor.

From this spot it is planned to run a boulevard a block in width across that part of the city to connect with Golden Gate Park, the boulevard to be flanked with agricultural, engineering and such other special buildings as may be selected. Just opposite the Park a special feature will be made of the national and county buildings, and the Oriental and international exhibits, which will be one of the most prominent features of a great world's exposition.

In Golden Gate Park proper it is planned to give an imitation of the Panama-Pacific canal by connecting the chain of lakes there now. In the westerly portion of the park will be placed the art gallery. The great stadium will be completed and made the center of the athletic sports of the exposition. Such buildings will in general be constructed here as will add to the permanent equipment of the park, and which may be maintained with advantage even after the exposition is over.

Plans are included for the building of an intermural railroad along the entire line of the exposition site. This is a very necessary feature, as the route of the fair will be several miles long, and will follow a line which at present is not covered even by street cars. If a railway of some kind were not built it would be necessary in going from one end of the fair grounds to the other to cross the entire city, which would take upwards of a half hour or longer.

Coming back into the city proper, the plans call for a civic center at Van Ness avenue and Market street. Grounds will be bought outright here and a combination opera house and convention hall will make this the focal point for all big gatherings and national conventions. From this point elaborate decorations will be erected down Market street to the ferry and along Van Ness to the entrance of the fair grounds proper. This will make every visitor arriving in the city from any point acquainted with the fact that he is in the fair city the moment he enters San Francisco. This will also serve to distribute the crowd well over the city, as the entire line of the decorations is certain to be lined with the thousand and one features which go to make a world's fair interesting.

The principal objection to the Harbor View site was that people from the suburban towns could reach the exposition without coming through San Francisco, merely by taking ferry boats which would run directly to and from the fair grounds. The principal objection to the Golden Gate Park site was that it would prevent any water demonstrations being held near the fair grounds, and this was held to be a fatal error for an exposition commemorating the joining of two oceans by the canal.

The adopted scheme is a happy solution of the difficulties which have beset the directors ever since they attempted to select a site. People from outlying towns cannot see all the exposition without coming through San Francisco. The merchants and business men will be benefited by the constant influx of people along the main business streets. The water displays can be had on a magnificent scale, and permanent buildings can be erected in the park without in the least damaging any of the horticultural improvements of the last thirty years.

He would indeed be a pessimist who could find anything to sorrow over in the decision to place the fair as above outlined.

The next move is to begin the actual work of construction.

JORDAN'S

You do not have to live near a church door to become infected with a desire to do kind things, any more than you need confine yourself to the seclusion of a "smart" district to imbibe the first principles of etiquette.

For what lies dormant in your heart will find expression in its own particular way, and rest assured every possible opportunity will be forthcoming to encourage its charitable inclinations.

One of the compensations in this whimsical and difficult world of ours is that there is so much of kindness in it, some of which is evidenced in the most unheard-of places, by those who seem shy lest discovery be made of their worthiness!

One man is there in San Francisco, a large, clean-souled Samaritan of the slums, who is earning for himself a golden harp of a most bejeweled and impressive character, and which no doubt will be played as an accompaniment to the echoes of hundreds of boy voices singing the praises of their earthly benefactor.

Possibly not once in all his days has this modern St. Nicholas listened to a pulpit sermon, perhaps even now he would hesitate to enter a sacred edifice amid goodly souls who chant responses to a curate's psalms.

This man keeps a saloon on Market street!

And he is doing a great and good work, fulfilling a noble impulse, which has beautified him among the little merchants of the streets, those solitary unmothered urchins, tattered, zealous, whose drone of "Piper! Piper! All about the big murder and suicide!" in melancholy cadences rises through the murky chill of an evening fog like a nocturnal dirge.

When these little strugglers have completed their sales of the day they have formed a cheerful habit of darting into the well known saloon, where warmth, protection and kindness are accorded them, and where a singular social club has been formed for the small newbies, the qualifications being a keen appetite, clean hands and faces, and a desire to return their gratitude in politeness and clean speech.

Paradoxical as it may seem, a great and crying need is thus being filled, and gratifying results have, during the club's twenty year existence, been accomplished.

The boys gather round a big comfy table laid with the niceties of fine napery and flowers, where wholesome, nutritious food, steaming hot and fragrant with sauces of a competent chef's skill is served, and which is dispensed only after a muster roll has been called and a personal inspection of ears and fingernails accomplished.

The little chaps, with shining, briskly rubbed faces, neatly brushed hair, their pitiful coats buttoned and pulled down in emulation of real Newport dandies, after a short blessing, begin their meal.

To many it is the first that day, and probably the last, but their hunger is never permitted to interfere with the ethics of good behavior and a striking finesse of table etiquette for which purpose the singular club was formed.

In a private room, away from the bar, where all classes of men congregate for their daily indulgence, the proprietor arranges his little guests, and intercepting the management of his business, which means money to him, he personally superintends the meal and presides like a grandiloquent fairy godmother in male attire over his hungry proteges.

He is only a saloonkeeper, this magnanimous man.

But if he had taken the orders, what a very lovable parson he would have made!

SOCIAL NEWS OF THE DAY.

Masters Henley and William Chapman entertained at a very delightful swimming party at Fort Shafter yesterday afternoon, when a number of their friends in the younger set were bidden to partake of their hospitality.

The young people arrived in army wagons which had conveyed them from the end of the car line, at three o'clock, and spent the greater part of the afternoon in swimming in the bathing tank of the military post—the largest tank on the island.

Later the hosts and their guests repaired to the quarters of Captain Berry, Miss Psyche Berry, Miss Mae Carden, Miss Abbie Lucas, Miss Thelma Murphy, Miss Callie Lucas, Miss Ethel Carter, Miss Pearl McCarthy, Miss Virginia McCarthy, Miss Margaret McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas.

Among those present were the Misses Myrtle Schuman, Madeline Ross, Pauline Schaefer, Thelma Murphy, Margaret Center, Rosamund Swanzy, Frances Cochrane, Helen Spalding, Ruth McChesney, Martha McChesney, Ruth Soper, Daphne Damon, Messrs. Wrenne Timberlake, Walter Cowles, Francis Cooper, Ned Burnham, Cyril Damon, William Hoogs, Donald Ross, Charles Stevens, Oswald Stevens, William Chapman and Henley Chapman.

Miss Pearl McCarthy and Miss Virginia McCarthy entertained at a very pretty dancing party last evening at the "Donna" in honor of Mr. Schoonberger, who leaves in the near future for New York.

The drawing room and dining room of the hotel had been opened into a large apartment, and decorated about the walls with trailing vines which also intertwined the chandeliers.

Potted palms and pink shaded lights loaned a picturesque touch to the ballroom, and the floor was in excellent condition.

Here the guests were received, by the two young hostesses and their guest of honor.

At eleven ices, cake and fruit punch were served.

Among those present besides the guests of the hotel were, Miss Claire Berry, Miss Psyche Berry, Miss Mae Carden, Miss Abbie Lucas, Miss Thelma Murphy, Miss Callie Lucas, Miss Ethel Carter, Miss Pearl McCarthy, Miss Virginia McCarthy, Miss Margaret McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, Mr. Schoonberger, Mr. Will Ross, Mr. Ed. Carden, Mr. Charles Littlejohn, Mr. George Cassidy, Mr. Albert Lucas, Mr. Clarence Dyer, Mr. John Ashley, Mr. Robert Chillingworth, Mr. Peter Phillips, and Mr. Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. Tackebury entertained at a very pretty informal dinner party last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Bowler.

The dinner table was trimmed in pink, cluster of roses forming a centerpiece.

Later the hosts and their guests motored to town where they attended one of the theaters.
